

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE AND STUDENTS LEARNING AUTONOMY AMONG THE STUDENTS OF AUTOMOTIVE MAJORITY IN SMK MUHAMMADIYAH I MOYUDAN SLEMAN

by:

Tri Rahma Adi Sumanto
05504244022

ABSTRACT

This study aims to determine the relationship of emotional intelligence and self-reliance learned in class XI students of Automotive Department in SMK Muhammadiyah I Moyudan Sleman.

This study is a correlational study. The population in this study was all students in grade XI Programs Automotive SMK Muhammadiyah I Moyudan Sleman, as much as 141 people. Sampling technique was proportional random sampling; the sample of this study was 104 of those students who were taken proportionately based on the number of classes in each grade. Data collection technique was using questionnaires. Analysis of the data for hypothesis was done by using a product moment correlation analysis.

The study showed that there was a relationship of emotional intelligence and self-reliance learning in class XI student of Automotive Department in SMK Muhammadiyah I Moyudan Sleman. The magnitude of the correlation coefficient (r) was equal to 0.567 with the significance value of 0.000 ($p < 0.05$).

Keywords: Emotional intelligence, self learning, product moment correlation.